

Chicago Great Western (CGW) had two notable paint passenger car schemes. As the delivery of their early F-Units began CGW adopted adding a matching stripe to the car. Due to budget cuts, 2 horizontal stripes became a single horizontal stripe then the final second scheme was a simplified maroon with a black roof. Lettering also was reduced on the name board from "Chicago Great Western" to simply "Great Western". A complete passenger car roster appears in the Morning Sun Chicago Great Western book with a terrific amount of photographs.
